FRANK DUNCAN READY TO ACCEPT CHALLENGE OF 'HUSKY' RICHARDS

Frank Duncan, the national 135 pound amateur wrestling champion, is willing to give Husky Richards of Fort Ruger, the match that the latter has asked for through the sporting columns of the Star-Bulletin. Duncan doesn't care to appear at a regular show, but will wrestle Richards at any athletic club or gymnasium, and is willing to make a substantial aide bet with the soldier. Negotiations are now being carried on, and there is a good chance of the match being arranged.

This is what the Seattle Post-Intelligencer has to say about Duncan, and the trip that he is now making in search of experience and adventure:

Frank Duncan, the Seattle Athletic Club's most famous lightweight wrestler, is going forth to see the world. With him will be Louis Ryno, another Seattle boy, who is quite an all-around athlete.

Duncan and Ryno will leave Seattle next Tuesday night and catch a steamship out of Vancouver, B. C., Wednesday noon. Their first stop will be at Honolulu, where they propose to enjoy the climate and see the sights.

l'LOUGHLIN'S GAME

(Praise of Maurice McLoughlin's tennis has been so unstinted and so general, that it is something of a novelty to find a recognized authority on the sport who states positively that the game of the "Galifornia Comet" is "essentially unsound." The criticism, written the day after McLoughlin's defeat by Wilding, is interesting, if not entirely convincing. It will be noted that this was written before the American team lifted the Davis Cup.)

Strokes and Science of Lawn Tennis," etc.

Primarily, McLoughlin did not win because his ground game is essentially unsound. McLoughlin is the most striking example of an ill-balanced game that I have ever seen. If it were possible for me to exchange my ground strokes for McLoughlin's. I would not be anxious to avail myself of the opportunity. But I should be quite glad to have his service, overhead smash, and volleying abilities in certain directions.

I felt practically certain that Mc-Loughlin's such as Gobert's, which lacks little if anything of McLoughlin's such as Gobert's, which lacks little if anything of McLoughlin's little if anything of McLoughlin's service would be a wooderful advantage to him aganist Wilding. But who has played McLoughlin's service before and is familiar with fast services such as Gobert's, which lacks head smash, and volleying abilities in certain directions.

I felt practically certain that Mc-Loughlin would not win. Probably I stood almost alone in this opinion in America. It is of course easy to say this now, so I may as well state that I told the editor of American Lawn rennis the day before the match that I did not think for one moment Mc-Loughlin could win, and that I have treely expressed that opinion among the lawn tennis players during the last week.

Also I had a small bet of a box of rect position with great uctivity. But the trouble is that he makes his forehand drive from set feet—that is to say, he does not lift his left foot and advance it at the moment he makes his stroke. Therefore, he gets especially as he sets his feet rather widely apart, very little body into his forehand stroke.

HILO, Aug. 22.—Ben de Mello and Pedro Paglinawan, a Filipino with fistic ambitions and a desire to get a little cash, will fight ten rounds at the Hilo armory next Saturday night. Two rattling good preliminaries are promised the fight fans. Special trains will be run from Keaau and Paguilo, which will return after the fight.

which adjoined the governor's yamen, contained a large stock of shells, bullets and explosives. Many soldiers were wounded by flying missiles in attempting to extinguish the blaze.

Also, I may mention the backhand crive of Theodore Roosevelt Pell. which is at the present time, so far as I am aware, the finest backhand stroke in the northern hemisphere. In deciding that McLoughlin could not this is the stroke which I have used this time win the championship of and advocated for fifteen or twenty the world; but I am satisfied that if years, and if McLoughlin had as good he will only take the trouble to ima backhand as Pell. Wilding would prove his ground game he is an ab-not have seen the way he went. not have seen the way he went. Also Backhand.

And there is no reason why he shouldn't have this backhand. I have been away from lawn tennis for practically five years, and at the present time I am able to drive a ball on the back hand better than the national champion of America. Now, that is a thing that it should be impossible for me to be able to say and to be pre-pared to prove on the tennis courts; and it would be impossible for me to say it as against McLoughlin if his methods were as sound as mine. But if the disparity in years and practice TOURNAME between us were twice as great as it is the truth of what I say would still remain, for lawn tennis is an extremely scientific game and any one who tries to play it by defective methods will infallibly be found out.

Taking him all around, I think that

W. A. Larned is the finest example of the correct production of the lawn tennis strokes I have ever seen, and it is a matter of wonder to me that a scientific people like the Americans have never attempted to standardize the lawn tennis strokes. Every stroke at lawn tennis is as clear as a stroke at billiards and should be as well known. It is also so at cricket and Aug. 16-Onhn vs. Cavalry. golf. Moreover, Wilding's strong forehand return, with its very quick drop, would come to McLoughlin's feet as he ran in and force him to play the ascending ball. Also, when Wilding was serving he would be at no disadvantage with McLoughlin in running in, for McLoughlin's ground game is not of an order to worry Wilding, who is in the habit of meeting men much McLoughlin's superior off the ground. In fact, it is hardly going too far to say that there are in the United States of America today at least a dozen men who could beat McLoughlin from the base line.

I do not see much opportunity for McLoughlin to improve unless he gets right down to haste principles in his ground game. Then I believe he would be a world beater.

After the young wanderers get enough of Honolulu and the Hawalian islands they will go to Anstralia. "I have not the slightest idea where we will go from there," said Dunean, "If we enjoy roaming around the world, we will figure out some new trip and go ahead. I cannot even guess when we will be back in Seattle."
